

Supporting Ageing Generations: A Modern Family Office Perspective

There's a deep sense of reassurance that comes from knowing ageing family members are well supported – not only in their practical care, but also in ways that help them thrive, remain independent and maintain wellbeing in later life.

Focusing on unity, lifelong learning, engagement and fulfilment – alongside financial wealth – is essential to helping families achieve what matters most, as outlined in Mutual Trust's publication Why the Modern Family Office Matters.

A growing need for personalised support

Australia's population aged 65 and over is projected to grow by 54% over two decades - from 4.31 million in 2021 to 6.66 million by 2041¹. At Mutual Trust, we are seeing this reflected in our own client base, with a significant and rising number of wealth owners aged 72 and above.

As families navigate the realities of ageing and longer lifespans, many are seeking holistic strategies to help their loved ones age with dignity, purpose and joy. This means looking beyond physical health and financial security to embrace overall wellbeing and meaningful engagement in daily life.

As a modern Family Office, Mutual Trust plays a unique and valuable role - integrating concierge services into a broader Family Office offering, to deliver a seamless, personalised experience that supports every aspect of family life.

It all begins with understanding what matters most

Every family is different, which is why it's critical to begin with open, thoughtful conversations. Mutual Trust takes the time to understand what's most important to each individual and to the family as a whole - aligning values, priorities and aspirations for the future.

“We're all hearing these days about exciting advances in longevity and life span. The trick is, longevity is only a gift if you know how to use it... There is much about ageing that we can't control. But there is much more that we can.”

To hear more from Coventry, Episode 12 of Mutual Trust's Purpose of Wealth podcast explores why considering human risk is just as financial risk.

From this foundation, we tailor support mechanisms that empower ageing family members to enjoy their daily lives with confidence and dignity, while giving younger generations peace of mind that their loved ones are well cared for and equipped to thrive.

Meeting the unique needs of each family

Concierge services are designed to meet the unique needs of each family. Mutual Trust works proactively to identify the right solutions, which may include, for example:

- Diary and calendar management
- Travel coordination (i.e. flights, trains, private cars)
- Accommodation arrangements
- Restaurant and event bookings
- Liaising directly with service providers (i.e. healthcare funds, insurance brokers)
- Property and asset maintenance
- Cashflow management and payment tracking
- Co-ordination of household support

These services are more than practical – they're deeply personal, helping family members stay independent, organised and supported in the moments that matter.

The value of bespoke concierge support lies in its depth and breadth.

Some families seek help with arranging high-quality in-home care, private drivers or coordinating trusted service providers.

For others, the focus is less on day-to-day support and more on creating experiences that enable all family members to fully participate.

For one family, our concierge team seamlessly orchestrated a multi-generational holiday – handling every detail from travel logistics to dietary preferences – this meant they could all experience the joy of connection, without the administrative burden.

Mutual Trust Case Study

Supporting independent living to help family members thrive

Following the passing of her husband over 15 years ago, Carol Ryan* continued living independently in their cherished family home.

Now in her early 80s, Carol likes to spend her time visiting friends and tending to her garden – a vibrant front yard which she has lovingly nurtured over the years. For Carol, gardening is more than a hobby, it's a source of joy. She also greatly values the comfort and sense of purpose it has provided during difficult times in life, such as her husband's passing.

Earlier this year, Carol's three adult children took her on a coastal holiday, where she spent much of the summer enjoying quality family time. On returning home, however, Carol's children noticed subtle changes in her physical strength and abilities.

While Carol remained determined to stay in the family home and maintain her independence, her children were becoming increasingly concerned about the physical demands of Carol's daily life – particularly when they couldn't be there during the week to support her.

During their quarterly family meeting, Carol's children mentioned this in passing and were surprised to learn of Mutual Trust's concierge offering and how it could support their mother's evolving needs.

Mutual Trust first took the time to explore Carol and her children's objectives, aspirations and requirements. We then presented tailored advice, sourcing thoughtful solutions that would allow Carol to live comfortably and happily in her own home, while easing the physical and logistical burdens she was facing.

This included:

- Engaging a trusted gardening service to regularly maintain the lawns and care for larger shrubs and trees, preserving the beauty of Carol's beloved garden
- Organising a private driver to ensure Carol could attend appointments and run errands in a safe, clean and comfortable vehicle
- Seamlessly coordinating all associated accounts to remove the administrative load from Carol and her family

Today, Carol continues to live independently and enjoys engaging in gardening activities that bring her joy - such as pruning her roses – while knowing the more physical burdensome tasks are taken care of. Further, the driver ensures she is able to maintain an active social life, getting out and about to spend time with her friends and feel part of the community.

For Carol's three children, they enjoy the peace of mind that comes with knowing their mother is living comfortably and has all the supports she needs in place.
